

Publications

WELCOME to International Educator's third annual special section of publications for international educators and their student. We invited publishers in the field to provide brief descriptions of their books and other resources so that you could have a helpful resource for the upcoming fall semester and beyond. Below you will find a listing—alphabetical by publisher—of all of the submitted publications. Each publisher's section includes contact information to allow you to get more information or to order their wares. A special catalog insert in this edition of International Educator covers NAFSA's own publications along with an order form.

The Impact of Bologna and Three-year Degrees on U.S. Admissions: A Focus on Europe, Australia and the United Kingdom

Capturing the presentations and discussions among participants from a November 2006 symposium, this monograph discusses topics such as international student mobility; ways in which the adoption of three-year degrees—especially in Europe and Australia—affect U.S. admissions policies and practices; the Bologna Process and Europe's progress toward developing EU-wide three-year degrees; curricular and policy issues specific to selected disciplines in the United States and abroad; and views of U.S. credit evaluators and accreditors.

Bogus Institutions and Documents

This volume is designed as a guidebook to give you the information and tools that you need in order to face and fight the complex battle against bogus institutions and degree fraud. This book will inform you about the issues, help you to learn techniques to detect bogus institutions and documents, offer guidelines in handling cases of fraud, help you to prevent your institution or organization from becoming a victim of fraud, and give you confidence in discussing all of these issues with colleagues and superiors.

Foreign Educational Credentials Required

Looking for a concise and easily referenced source for information on credentials and other documentation that would be required for entry from a given country to a specified level of study? The fifth edition of Foreign Educational Credentials indicates, in a convenient and consistent form, the educational credentials that should be available for applicants from more than 200 countries.

The AACRAO International Graduate Admissions Guide

A companion to The AACRAO International Guide: A Resource for International Educational Professionals, this volume provides a hands-on approach to enable you to determine the admissibility of applicants from abroad to your graduate degree and non-degree programs.

Accreditation Mills

Accreditation Mills is the first publication of its kind to explore the growing influence and threat of accreditation fraud. The author, Allen Ezell, gives a historical perspective of the problem, explores the relationship between degree mills and accreditation mills, and defines tactics used by mills to deceive the public. The book cites case studies and undercover operations, including examples of how individuals and groups have made a stand in the fight against degree mills and accreditation mills.

At Home in the World: Bridging the Gap Between Internationalization and Multicultural Education

This publication, the fourth in the Ford Foundation funded Global Learning for All series, helps institutions launch conversations about the relationship between internationalization and multicultural education. It outlines the common ground these areas share, the ways in which these areas diverge, and potential strategies for advancing conversations that bridge the gap between internationalization and multicultural education.

Apples and Oranges in the Flat World: A Layperson's Guide to International Comparisons of Postsecondary Education

This publication is a primer on making sense of comparative performance measures of postsecondary education. It explains the limitations of international comparisons, and describes the most frequently cited sources. Some of the more commonly cited indicators are presented, including categories of educational performance; production of scientists and engineers; finances; spending in science and technology; student mobility and international enrollments; and international rankings of institutions.

A Handbook for Advancing Comprehensive Internationalization: What Institutions Can Do and What Students Should Learn

Produced with the support of the Ford Foundation, this handbook, the third in the Global Learning for All series, encourages institutions to adopt a strategy for comprehensive internationalization that integrates both programmatic inputs and student learning outcomes. It includes illustrative examples and documents drawn from ACE member institutions.

Venturing Abroad: Delivering U.S. Degrees Through Overseas Branch Campuses and Programs

U.S. colleges and universities are becoming increasingly mobile, setting up branch campuses and offering their degrees abroad. This publication addresses what they are doing, the strategies pursued, the leadership issues and challenges, and the hot spots of cross-border activity.

Internationalizing the Campus: A User's Guide

This publication is a practical guide for higher education administrators and faculty engaged in internationalizing their institutions. It draws on literature in the fields of organizational change and international education, and offers resources developed through ACE's experience with diverse institutions around the country.

Where Faculty Live: Internationalizing the Disciplines

Madeleine F. Green and Robert Shoenberg

This essay, the second in the Global Learning for All series, grows out of an ACE project funded by the Carnegie Corporation of New York. The essay highlights the role of national disciplinary associations in promoting internationalization of the disciplines and outlines how global learning outcomes can provide useful tools for faculty. 2006.

Building a Strategic Framework for Comprehensive Internationalization

Christa L. Olson, Madeleine F. Green, and Barbara A. Hill

First in a series of working papers on internationalization and funded with generous support from the Ford Foundation, this essay outlines two complementary approaches to internationalization as part of an institutional strategy and illustrates how these approaches can be used together in an integrated manner. 2005.

Internationalization in U.S. Higher Education: The Student Perspective

This report, which draws on earlier research conducted by ACE on the internationalization of U.S. colleges and universities, focuses on student experiences and beliefs regarding international education at “highly active” institutions. Funded by the U.S. Department of Education, the report also describes differences between students from highly active institutions and those from less active institutions, when such differences are notable. 2005.

Handbook for Hosting: The AED Guide to Welcoming U.S. Students to Your Campus

Written to build and enhance institutional capacity to serve as hosts for education abroad programs, the Handbook provides a comprehensive picture of the educational, student services, housing, and contractual relationships inherent in being a hosting partner with a U.S. educational institution or education abroad program provider. There are chapters on U.S. higher education, collaborative relationships, appropriate student orientation, and health and safety concerns. The publication’s 360 pages include 25 appendices containing sample forms and materials.

Proceedings from the Colloquium on Diversity in Education Abroad

The collection of papers, keynote remarks, participant questions, and the Colloquium’s conclusions and action plan from the 2006 day-long program on building greater diversity among U.S. study abroad participants, organized by AED. Discussions are focused on issues, data, and practices for increasing participation among students of color, and of those with limited economic means. The Proceedings include a Colloquium summary, keynote speech, 10 presented papers, and two supplemental articles, in addition to the action plan.

Charting a Hero's Journey

By Linda A. Chisholm

Based on the work of Joseph Campbell, and using excerpts from the journals of such people as Jane Addams, Langston Hughes, Octavio Paz, Samuel Johnson, Mary Kingsley, and Kathleen Norris, this book is a guide to the writing of a journal for college students engaged in study abroad, off-campus study, and/or service-learning.

Service-Learning Across Cultures: Promise and Achievement

Edited by Humphrey Tonkin

Funded by the Ford Foundation, this book explores the effects of international service-learning on the students who participate, the institutions where they study, and the agencies where they perform their service. It demonstrates that international service-learning is transforming for all concerned, and a means through which we can create citizens and individuals responsive to the needs of others, civically engaged, and prepared for a peaceful future based on the globalization of compassion, tolerance, and understanding.

Understanding the Education—
And Through It the Culture—in Education Abroad

By Linda A. Chisholm and
Howard A. Berry

Based on the premise that an educational system both reflects and shapes a culture, this short book is a guide for students going abroad to study. It leads them step-by-step through an in-depth investigation of the university they attend overseas and higher education in their host country, helping them both to be a successful student and to come to a deeper knowledge of their host culture.

Visions of Service

Edited by Linda A. Chisholm

Introduces students to five of the world's great religions—Hinduism, Buddhism, Judaism, Christianity, and Islam—with a special emphasis on each religion's philosophy of service and call to serve. With excerpts regarding service and social responsibility from the sacred writings of each tradition, followed by questions for study and reflection, Visions of Service gives students a framework for considering the differences and commonalities among the religions on the subject of serving those in need.

Knowing and Doing: The Theory and Practice of Service-Learning

Edited by Linda A. Chisholm

A festschrift written by colleagues around the world in honor of Howard A. Berry, this book is a collection of essays about service-learning together with a selection of Berry's speeches and papers. A sophisticated collection of writings about international education in general and service-learning in particular, Knowing and Doing illuminates the power of service-learning and gives testimony to the conviction of many that this pedagogy will have an enduring and transforming effect on higher education.
