Darla Deardorff's Model of Intercultural Competence

http://www.nafsa.org/_/file_/theory_connections_intercultural_competence.pdf

Intercultural competence is a process – a lifelong process – a development process – of how one acquires the necessary knowledge, skills, and attitudes – as one does to the actual aspects of intercultural competence and as such, critical reflection becomes a powerful tool in the process of intercultural competence development.
Definition of Intercultural Competence

“ability to” be patient, to learn, listen, observe, withhold judgment and tolerate ambiguity ("comfortable with the uncomfortable"), “be humble”, “put yourself in the shoes of the other person you are communicating with..”, “make connections with own experience”, empathize, be open-minded, to “introspect, reflect and relate to one’s own culture and experience”, “have a sense of humor”, i.e. “making fun of oneself”
Elements comprising intercultural competence:

- Attitudes (Respect/Openness/Curiosity and Discovery)
- Knowledge (Cultural Self-awareness/Deep Cultural Knowledge/Sociolinguistics Awareness)
- Skills (To listen, observe and evaluate/To analyze, interpret, and relate)
- Internal Outcomes
- External Outcomes
Survey Results

Attitudes/Knowledge/Skills?

comes from personal “priceless” experience (not just being Foreign-Born”): - “awkward position”, “making mistakes”, “setbacks”; “hardship”; “all the sufferings, difficulties I faced..”

Being Foreign Born ≠ Intercultural Competent
Personal / Advocacy

- “Being international is like a disease”
- “Being Asian is overbearing”
- “Truly listening”, “genuine interest”
- FBIE with higher intercultural competence has higher job satisfaction
- Personal mission leads to advocacy – not just a job – “passionate”
